1. In mid-1963, an infantry regiment [ ] was stationed in Botosani. The medical officer of the unit was Captain (Dr.) Paul Dinu, who was born in about 1931. The command of the military commissariat in Botosani was Colonel Gherasim (fmu), and his deputy was Major Panait (first name possibly Constantin).
2. In 1960, Colonel Bob Zamfirescu was commander of the surgical department of the military hospital on Viting Street in Bucharest.
3. In early 1959, a military labor (MFA-Constructie) regiment [ ] was stationed in barracks behind the Gheorghiu Dej Clothing Factory, on Drumul Taberei Street in Bucharest. During the summer, the regiment consisted of about 1500 men while, during the winter, when construction was almost at a standstill, the regiment numbered only about 600 or 700 men. Most of the soldiers of the unit were assigned to the build-

2. Infantry Regiment in Topraisar

50X1-HUM

1. In mid-1958, the 233rd Antiaircraft Artillery Regiment was stationed in Targu-Jiu, at barracks near the textile plant in that city. It had about 500 men, excluding officers and noncommissioned officers (NCO's), under the command of Major Marin Ionescu; the chief of staff was Captain Zaharia Archideanu. The regiment consisted of four artillery batteries, each with four guns, one platoon constituting the regimental driving school, one platoon constituting the NCO school, and a services platoon. The regiment shared its barracks, kitchen, and mess hall with another antiaircraft artillery regiment

2. In early 1959, an infantry regiment was stationed at the village of Topraisar, about 24 kilometers from Constanta. The barracks of the regiment had been built some years previously but included five unfinished one-story buildings. The regiment was not at full strength and consisted only of 800 men, excluding officers and NCO's, under the command of a major. Units of the regiment were an infantry battalion of four companies, a tank company, an artillery company, a signals company consisting of two platoons equipped with ATI wire communications and two platoons equipped with R-106, REM, and PP radio sets, an engineers platoon, a reconnaissance platoon, and a headquarters (services) platoon.
